Odd Meeting at Auditorium
Annex Balances Honors.

Chairman Hitchcock Will Open
Headquarters in Harvester Building to-day and Arrange for Conference with Men of West—Chairman
Atwood Tells of Demand for Orators to Stump the Country.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—Republican and Democratic leaders in the national campaign found themselves under one roof this morning when the chiefs of each party were busy with plans for encompassing the defeat of the other. The rival generals met in the corridors and the office of the Auditorium Annex with courteous and friendly salutations, and it required a knowledge of politics and faces for the observer to realize that the battle for the votes of the country was in progress right before him.

Chairman Hitchcock, of the Taft campaign, completed preparations for the opening of headquarters in the Harvester Building to-morrow morning and also arranged for an important conference with the big men of the party in the West, to-morrow morning.

Victor Rosewater, of Nebraska, and Senator Borah, of Idaho, arrived this afternoon.

Compare Their Notes.
Representative Frank O. Lowden already was in the city, and Charles Nagel, of Missouri, came this afternoon. The five men got together for a comparison of information as to conditions in the West, taking up the general situation and laying plans for the campaign. T. Coleman Du Pont, of Delaware; Richard V. O'Hanlon, of New York, and National Treasurer George R. Sheldon are due to arrive to-morrow morning, when further meetings will be held for the arrangement of the final details of preparation.

Mr. Hitchcock put an end to the rumor that Fred W. Upham would be appointed a vice chairman of the national committee to take charge of the Chicago headquarters.

"If a vice chairman were appointed, which I do not think is likely," he said, "he would have to be a member of the Republican National Committee. According to present plans, William Hayward, the secretary of the national committee, will be in charge of the campaign offices here."

Advisory Committee Secret.

The national chairman was not ready to give out the names of the members of the advisory committee, which has been awaited with a good deal of interest. He said he had picked the men from the East, but not those from the West, and would not be ready to make the names public until next week. There will be nine men on the committee, all prominent apart from their political association.

Mr. Hitchcock will remain in Chicago until Monday, when he will go to Utica to take part in the ceremonies incident to the formal notification of James S. Sherman, the Vice Presidential nominee. He confirmed the report that William Taft would confine his speaking to Cincinnati, although there have been numerous appeals from different sections of the country for campaign talks by the head of the ticket.

With Alton B. Parker and Gov. John A. Johnson, of Minnesota, as its chief stars, outside Presidential candidate, the speakers' bureau of the Democratic national campaign was given its start to-day by John H. Atwood, of Kansas, chairman of the subcommittee on orators.

While Samuel Gompers has not offered his services as yet, preferring to devote most of his time to the campaign which the American Federation of Labor will make for the Democratic ticket, Mr. Atwood said many labor leaders of prominence had volunteered to take the stump for Bryan and Kern.

Democratic Oratory Grate.

No speaker will be paid in the Democratic campaign. The custom which Mark Hanna began and the Democratic committee in 1904 continued has been abandoned.

"We have more volunteers than we can handle," said Mr. Atwood. "Many insist on paying their own expenses. Alton B. Parker wrote assuring us he would do anything and everything he could. Gov. Johnson has made the same tender. Raymond Robbins, of Chicago, is already out on the stump. There is an unprecedented demand for campaign orators of the Democratic brand this year."

"I have been connected with a number of national campaigns, but the demand for speakers this year is remarkable. Here I am confronted with hundreds of letters asking for speakers, and the campaign is hardly begun."

"Nearly a score of Democrats in the United States Senate have tendered their services, and volunteered to defray their own expenses. The same is true of members of the House. Party workers are prompted by a degree of patriotism this year that is refreshing."

"You ask me about Mr. Bryan's chances in Kansas? Certainly I think he will get the electoral vote. I have just returned from a trip across the State. Everywhere I encountered Republicans who will support Bryan and Kern."

National Chairman Norman E. Mack held a conference with Thomas Taggart, of Indiana, who arrived in the morning, saying that he "had been sent for," but he did not know why. The man from Indiana simply laughed when told of the report that the Democrats had left from the last national campaign $30,000, of which he had charge, and said that any one would confer a favor if he would tell him where the money could be found.

SIX PROSTRATED
BY HEAT OF SUN

One of the Victims Not Expected to Live.

MOTORMAN IS STRICKEN

Overcome While Running Car on Mt. Pleasant Heights.

All the Cases Treated at Emergency and Casualty Hospitals—While Not the Hottest Day of Summer, It Was Probably the Most Uncomfortable Up to Date—Cooler Weather Now Promised by Weather Bureau.

Heat and humidity went hand in hand through the city of Washington yesterday and played general havoc with comfort.

Even the street cars were hot, and the asphalt worked overtime. Pennsylvania avenue sizzled and sputtered, and was primed and ready for the man who wanted to cook an egg on its scorching boom.

Six persons fell under the rays of the sun in various parts of the city. Down on the Avenue the thermometers registered anywhere from 108 in the shade to 132. At the Weather Bureau the needle was a few degrees lower. The weather officials are afraid to let the needle go too high. They are conservative, people, even though the weather is radical.

Adopt Cooling Methods.

In the meantime, the people of Washington adopted all sorts of methods to keep cool, physically and mentally. Not even Baldwin was mentioned in well-regulated families.

And while it was not the hottest day of the summer, the honest Washingtonian will agree that the atmospheric conditions were the most unpleasant of any day up to the present time. There was some consolation in the weather man's promise that to-day would be somewhat cooler.

The six heat prostrations were treated at the Emergency and Casualty hospitals, four at the former and two at the latter. The day recorded the greatest number of prostrations of any day of the summer season.

One of the patients taken to the Emergency Hospital is in a serious condition and may not recover.

Duncan May Not Survive.

Charles Duncan, thirty-three years old, of 326 H street northeast, was overcome at Seventeenth and C street northwest at 3 o'clock. Duncan was working on the new building of the Bureau of American Republics at the corner of Mount Pleasant street and Park Road. He was removed to the Emergency Hospital. After receiving treatment he was taken to his home, 62 C street northeast, at 8 o'clock last night. Philip E. Barnes, twenty-two years old, of 56 T street northwest, was overcome in Rhode Island avenue, between Second and Third streets northwest, at 6 o'clock yesterday evening. He was taken to the Emergency Hospital. The physicians there at first believed Barnes to be suffering from alcoholism, but later decided he had been overcome by the heat.

Prostrated by the heat while working at the Farragut apartment house, Seventeenth and I streets northwest, at 5 o'clock, Annie Steed, negro, twenty-three years old, was taken to the Emergency Hospital in an ambulance. Later, she was sent to her home.

Negro Sent to His Home.

While working at Seventh and H streets northeast, at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, George Howard, negro, thirty-five years old, living at Hyattsville, Md., was prostrated by the heat. He was taken to the Casualty Hospital and was later sent home.

A case that puzzled the physicians at the Casualty Hospital was that of William Powers, negro, sixty-seven years old, of 11 D street southeast, who was taken to the hospital from in front of his home at 5 o'clock. The case was diagnosed as a heat prostration, but members of Powers' family said he had been ill for days. After several hours' observation it was decided Powers was suffering from the heat.

Board Will Decide To-day.

The official board of test, which will pass upon the speed and endurance of the dirigible and recommend that the machine be accepted by the War Department, is composed of Maj. Russell, Maj. Squier, Capt. Wallace, Lieut. Lahm, and Lieut. Foulis. All the members, with one possible exception, are enthusiastic over the showing of the dirigible thus far, and doubtless will recommend its adoption into the military establishment of the United States. ## TWO TRIPS YESTERDAY

Made Average Speed of Nineteen
Miles an Hour.

Aviator and Engineer Believe They Have Met Requirements of Government and that Dirigible Will Be Accepted for Use by Signal Corps.
In Flight To-day the Balloon Will Be in the Air About Two Hours.

Negotiating eight and a quarter miles in twenty-eight minutes, Capt. Thomas Baldwin in two separate flights from Fort Myer to Cherrydale, Va., yesterday demonstrated to representatives of the Signal Corps that his dirigible is capable of maintaining the average speed necessary for its use in the United States army.

The flights were made without the slightest hitch, and were by far the most successful ever made by Capt. Baldwin and Engineer Curtiss. They were the last of the speed tests.

This afternoon the sky sailors will remain in the air two hours to test the endurance of the dirigible. Capt. Baldwin announced last evening that the flight would be made between 1 o'clock in the afternoon and 7 o'clock in the evening. The dirigible will visit Washington, it being Capt. Baldwin's intention to sail to the Monument and circle around the top several times. He may sail over the downtown business district, but this is impracticable.

Return from Washington.

After his visit to Washington, Capt. Baldwin will return to Fort Myer. If the two hours have not elapsed by the time he reaches the parade ground, he probably will sail toward Ballston or circle over the drill field.

Unofficial figures taken by a representative of The Washington Herald, who followed the balloon in an automobile, showed the first trip to Cherrydale, a distance of two and one-sixteenth miles out and an equal distance back, was made in fifteen minutes. This gives Capt. Baldwin an average of six and one-half miles an hour, allowing half a minute for a wide turn over the flag at Cherrydale. The second flight over the same course was made in thirteen minutes, allowing three-quarters of a minute for a much wider turn. This gives an average speed of a trifle over nineteen miles an hour.

Capt. Baldwin and Engineer Curtiss, as well as members of the board of test of the Signal Corps, were elated over the flights made in such good time. The second flight was begun immediately after the dirigible returned from the first cruise.

"We got the speed to-day," said Capt. Baldwin, "and I believe we have got the government money. In an automobile, showed the first trip to Cherrydale, a distance of two and one-sixteenth miles out and an equal distance back, was made in fifteen minutes. This gives Capt. Baldwin an average of six and one-half miles an hour, allowing half a minute for a wide turn over the flag at Cherrydale. The second flight over the same course was made in thirteen minutes, allowing three-quarters of a minute for a much wider turn. This gives an average speed of a trifle over nineteen miles an hour."

Curtiss Is Enthusiastic.

Mr. Curtiss was enthusiastic over the performance of the machine, notwithstanding the wind and the fact that I shut off the engine about forty times in order to get better control over it. Each time I increased the speed, the balloon began to pitch. This made it necessary to shut down and wait a few seconds until the bag settled level again.

"The second trip was made in much better time than the first. Of course we did not attempt to time ourselves, but we know from the continued high speed and perfect balance and almost straight course, that we made the second voyage at least two minutes quicker than the first."

"The engine worked perfectly and I was kept busy putting on and cutting down speed. The planes behaved ideally, and served their purpose. If we remain in this air two hours, I believe we will have developed a machine capable of flying over every requirement laid down by the War Department. Remaining aloft two hours is simply play. We could remain aloft two days if we had enough lubricating oil and gasoline to run the engine."

Maj. Squier, at whose suggestion Capt. Baldwin and Mr. Curtiss made the second ascension a few moments after the first was ended, said last night that the board of test would hold a meeting at the War Department this morning, and announce the official time of each flight and the average rate of speed. After this average speed is figured out, Capt. Baldwin will have to maintain 70 per cent of it throughout the two hours he is aloft to-day. The official average probably will be in the neighborhood of fifteen or seventeen miles an hour, making it necessary for Capt. Baldwin and Mr. Curtiss to travel thirty or thirty-four miles in two hours. In order to meet the speed requirements of the War Department specifications.

THE GOAL IS IN SIGHT.

EXPLOSION TURNED

WAS ONLY WORKMEN BLASTING

Deposed Turkish Minister Remains
Seriously Ill and Will Not Attempt to Leave Washington for Several Days at Least—Denial of Report that He Is Stranded in Capital City.

Aroused to a high state of nervous tension by the fear of a tragedy, and the mysterious movements of plain clothes men, residents in the neighborhood of the former Turkish Legation, 139 Calvert street northwest, were thrown into excitement yesterday afternoon by a loud report, similar to the noise of an exploding bomb.

Windows and doors were opened, and in a few seconds Calvert street was the scene of excited groups, composed mostly of women and girls. It was 3 o'clock when the noise was heard. Every eye was turned in the direction of the former legation, where the window shades were pulled down to exclude the sun and the doors closed to keep out the heat. Finally, when nothing more was heard, and no unusual proceedings occurred at the house where Mehmed Ali Bey lay ill in bed, the Calvert street people became quiet.

Only Workmen Blasting.

It was afterward learned that workmen were blasting near Rock Creek, about two blocks west of the former legation, and it is thought the noise was nothing more than the explosion of a charge of dynamite to loosen a section of earth or rock.

A probably annoyed by the calls of newspaper men, the members of the Turkish household have entrenched themselves behind a barricade calculated to resist the attack of the most persistent reporter.

When a reporter for The Washington Herald called at the former legation last night, numerous lights were to be seen on all floors of the house. The door to the main entrance stood wide open, so that a light in the hall could be plainly seen from the street. The house was as still as the proverbial house on the proverbial night before Christmas.

The screen door being unlocked made possible the ringing of an electric bell, which sounded far away. No response was made, the bell was pushed a second time, but no ring was heard. It is thought probable the rings at the door have worried Mehmed Ali Bey, who is reported seriously ill.

A small window, looking out on the front porch is used as a reconnoitering tower, from which all visitors may be viewed before being given permission to enter.

Paper on the Porch.

The floor of the porch was covered with bits of paper, some of them covered with unintelligible writing. While these were being examined, two well-appearing, immaculately dressed men, clad in negligee costume, with white flannel trousers and white canvas shoes, made a noiseless appearance and were not seen until one of them spoke.

Questioned if they were connected with the former legation, the young men declined to answer, although one of them hinted in the negative. Despite this, both seemed to be well informed in the affairs of the household.

It is said authoritatively that these men are members of the secret service, stationed at the Calvert street house by Chief Wilkie, at the instigation of the State Department.

Much surprise was manifested when a dispatch was read to the secretary of the deposed minister from Constantinople to the effect that the government proposes to raise the legation at Washington to an embassy and appoint Kigian Bey, now minister at Bucharest, as Ambassador to the United States. The secretary said Ali Bey had received no such information, and it was unknown if Mundji Bey, the Crowd Said He Would Never Die.

"Rolling" and gazing into the sky awaiting an apparition, to foretell the resurrection of their beloved leader, the congregation of Bishop Crowley's church in this city, the first of the "Rollers," and at the end of three days he was resurrected from the dead, in imitation of Christ.

Interested spectators looked on, but the apparition did not materialize. Dressed in black, with white bells and bows on their waists, arms, and heads, the feminine "Rollers," who are the majority of Bishop Crowley's, are mourning. All day yesterday they congregated and assured each other of abiding faith. Only three months ago, Bishop Crowley died in his home in Washington, and at the end of three days he was resurrected from the dead, in imitation of Christ.

Services are crowded. The services this week have been even more frequent than usual. Friday night's service is usually a singing service, and the "Rollers" are superbly in harmony. For a year or more it has been the habit of many persons to stand outside the church, watch the physical portion of the service from the sidewalk, and listen to the singing.

This week the services have been accentuated, but last night they had an air that scattered solemnity even in the throng on the sidewalk.

Many of the sisters in the faith moaned and wept aloud in their grief, their tones swelling in the hymnals in perfect rhythm, but dolorous and sad. Strong is the faith in the majority, and they expect vision in the skies. Eagerly they reassure one another with a recital of the death of their recent leader, to wash away their sins. For three nights he had laid in a sepulcher conveniently built at his home, and at the end of the third day, with "an ominous roll of thunder, he arose from the dead," and there was great rejoicing. In the face of this miracle they refuse to believe the apparent mortality, and are confident of a second resurrection.

Invents the Holy Kiss.

Crowley's ceremony for marriages was an invention. His bestowal of the high sounding name of "Daughter of Jerusalem" brought him many female converts, but the great problem was getting the men into his close. After much thought, the wily prophet invented the "holy kiss." This kiss united in marriage the single maidens and the bachelors. It also united in a second and third marriage many who were neither maid nor bachelor. This ceremony was a five-minute smack, with the lips upon the forehead. In a short time "Prophet" Crowley had as many male members of his church as he did female.

There are "Foot Washers" churches in many cities in the United States, and in some places in Africa. It is estimated that Crowley had a following of more than 200,000.

ONE MAN KILLED IN RIOT

Crowd of 10,000 Attack Troops

Prohibitionist Candidate for President Is Hit with a Brick and Many Others Are Wounded by Intemperate People—Prisoners Charged with Assaults on Women Saved by Sheriff's Run—Unable to Keep Order.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 14.—All detachments of militia here—Troop D, First Cavalry; Company C, Fifth Infantry, and the Gatling-gun section of the Fifth Infantry—with the fire department and the police, were unable to quell a mob that to-night rushed about the city, first threatening an assault upon the county jail, hurling bricks at militia and police, and shouting "Lynch the niggers!"

The riot was precipitated by another criminal assault before daylight this morning by a negro, who crept into the home of Mrs. Earl Hallam, 115 North Fifth street, dragged her from bed into her garden, where he assaulted her and left her unconscious. To-day a negro, named George Richardson, was arrested and taken to the home of Mrs. Hallam, who said she believed he was her assailant.

In a cell next to Richardson's was Joe James, a negro who a few weeks ago entered the home after midnight of A. Ballard, a prominent Christian, and attempted to assault his eighteen-year-old daughter, and in a fight with the girl's father stabbed him to death.

Felled by Sheriff's Run.

A mob this afternoon assembled at the jail crying for the blood of two negro prisoners. This evening when the mob became menacing the sheriff called an automobile to the jail at an appointed hour.

Just a few moments before that time he had the fire department make a run to within a block of the jail. The crowd rushed to the scene of the pretended fire, and while the mob was thus broken up, deputies rushed the negro prisoners into the automobile, hurried them through the city, flagged a Chicago and Alton north-bound train, and took the prisoners to jail at Bloomington.

To-night the mob at the jail here grew to thousands and fully 5,000 more people surged through the streets near by. At 8 o'clock Troop D charged down the street, clearing the walks. A volley of bricks came from the mob. John Brownell and Harry White were among the soldiers stunned by bricks.

Smashed Auto Owner's Store.

While the entire police force, sheriff's force, and militia were endeavoring to quell the mob at the jail hundreds crowded around the restaurant of H. T. Lohr, near the corner of Fifth and Monroe streets, in the most central portion of the business district. The crowd had heard that the negro prisoners had been taken out of the city in Lohr's automobile, and for this reason they gathered around the restaurant of H. T. ## Hit Prohibitionist Candidate.

On the courthouse square Eugene W. Chaffin, Prohibition candidate for President of the United States, delivering an address, turned to take his handkerchief from a back pocket. Rioters thought he was preparing to draw a gun and some one hurled a brick, which struck him. It was a glancing blow and did little injury, but broke up the meeting.

Three negroes whom the crowd attacked and gave a severe beating took refuge late to-night in the sheriff's office. Three members of the Gatling gun section were wounded by the mob, and they were taken care of in the sheriff's office.

Troops Surround Jail.

A cordon of troops surrounds the jail. A committee of relatives of Mrs. Hallam was taken through the jail by Sheriff Werner to prove that the negroes were not there. At 9 o'clock the mob again gathered in Lohr's restaurant and nearly everything in the cafe was destroyed. Peoria and other cities have been called upon for troops to quell the riot. The mob is in complete possession at the corner of Fifth and Monroe streets, where, at 10 p. m., 10,000 people blocked the street.

One Man Killed.

The riot grew more violent toward midnight, and Louis Johnson, of 1308 East Reynolds street, was shot through the neck at Lohr's restaurant and instantly killed. A boy named Milton was shot through the arm. Three more soldiers were injured by thrown missiles.

NO DATE SET FOR THAW.

Bankruptcy Hearing Not Fixed Owing to Absentments.

Pittsburg, Aug. 14.—When Referee in Bankruptcy William R. Vanecko called the name Thaw in a long list he was calling off to-day, there was no response from any one in the room, which was crowded with friends of Thaw and attorneys who had come to hear the date for the first meeting of creditors fixed. No local representative of Thaw was present, and no attorney put in an appearance either in person or by representatives, and the reading of the list was concluded in silence.

The failure of any definite action in fixing a date for the first meeting came as a great surprise.
